Guidelines of community life

This document is THE flagship of this community. It is intended to describe in a process-oriented way the ideals of the coexistence we seek and how we intend to master the difficulties that arise, without being able to rely on the crutches of paragraphs.

Guidelines for community life

In the service of humanity and the earth, we agree the following as our principles of life at the condominium Barrio cerrado "Paraiso Verde". Our condominium "Paraiso Verde" shall be a place that not only allows but encourages individual expression and the search for purpose. Human growth can only come about by experiencing one's own boundaries.

The seed of the "new age" lies within us, no one can walk the path for us, no one can walk it alone for the benefit of all. We want to live together and seek nothing less than to align the "individual being", which is inherent in every living being, with the highest of Divine Creation.

- We live in clarity and integrity and seek nothing less than the truth.
- We live in openness with deep listening to understand the will of others and seek nothing less than mindfulness.
- We live in gratitude and reverence for the uniqueness of every life and seek nothing less than love.
- We live in courage and determination and seek nothing less than balance.
- We live in awareness and responsibility and seek nothing less than peace.
- We live in acceptance and devotion and seek nothing less than the path of our soul.
- We live in respect for creation and in recognition of natural law and seek nothing less than freedom.
- We live in responsibility for our health, which manifests itself in body, soul and spirit, and seek nothing less than the value of life.
- We live in self-responsibility for our livelihood and seek nothing less than independence.
- We live in cooperation, act in joint creation and preservation and seek nothing less than community.

Far-reaching changes are taking place around the world: an ever-increasing, purely ego-oriented individualization, digitalization, loss of values, heteronomy, legal overregulation, outsourcing of human thinking and human decisions to algorithms instead of exploring one's own creativity are shaping the trend in industrially highly developed countries. The human being as a divinely animated being disappears into insignificance, depression and meaningless activities replace the feeling for one's own power.

Fears about the future are deliberately fueled by monopolies of opinion, truth and lies, good and evil, right and wrong, people are increasingly disoriented. They lose their connection, their roots, access to their creativity, family and social structures break down. The destruction of previously familiar traditions, conventions and values without the prospect of alternatives leads to a lack of stability and often results in a lack of restraint. As a result, social debate is taking place in an increasingly narrow discourse space, but is being conducted in an increasingly untaboored or even uninhibited form.

Many of us are looking for answers to the challenges of our time. Who am I, what is the meaning of life, how do I want to and be able to shape my life freely? These questions go hand in hand with the need for a healthy and wholesome place to live and work. As different as we all are, we have a lot in common in the reasons why we came here. We all chose this community project because we want to live differently.

As different as we all are, we have a lot in common in the reasons why we came here. We all chose this community project because we want to live differently. We want to be an active part of this world. We want to be free to live what we feel is natural and true.

The development towards the "new age" requires a high level of emotional and social competence. Everyone will feel this "growing and becoming" of the community. It will challenge us all again and again. Everyone will reach their limits and have to jump over their shadows. We will throw dogmas overboard and overcome our fears, compromise.

The development towards the "new era" requires a high level of emotional and social competence. Everyone will feel this "growing and becoming" of the community. It will challenge us all again and again. Everyone will reach their limits and have to jump over their shadows. We will throw patterns of belief overboard, overcome fears and make compromises. This process will require us to see other opinions for what they are, the opinion of another person. This opinion is not the person him/herself. We will value other people's opinions because they enhance our world of experience. We will learn and welcome all this as inner growth.

We have set ourselves the goal of being a community that will live, work and act together on the basis of moral values and spiritual self-understanding. This community will form a sovereign and as self-sufficient a unit as possible, which also wants to have a healthy, positive effect on the outside world.

Honest communication and peace. Dealing with each other should take place according to the principles of non-violent communication, free attentiveness without judgment and with reflection on one's own projections.

This creates a climate of mutual appreciation that makes living together a joyful, enjoyable adventure and creates a learning environment for our children that allows their inherent talents to shine through.

The aim is for decisions to be made on the basis of knowledge and mutual respect in a consensus process. Decisions, especially regarding the use of financial resources, should be made with a balance of individual responsibility and broad support.

with a balance of individual responsibility and broad support. Freedom in intellectual life, equality in legal life and fraternity in economic life are the overriding ideals that should guide decision-making processes.

We have voluntarily decided to live only in community with other people who are mRNA free. We are generally neither for nor against vaccinations, but we claim the right for ourselves - just like people who close their living areas to unvaccinated people - to create a living area in which the inhabitants of a community are spared the scientifically proven harmful effects of mRNA vaccinations in their everyday lives.

Our right is based on the human right to life, the right to health and the right to freely choose one's community and on the equal rights of vaccinated and unvaccinated people, who are free to define their own areas of life.

We recognize the tension between the individual and the community as our area of learning.

We will practise that we:

1. communicate peacefully with each other
2. communicate our contributions in the "I" form whenever possible. No one has the right to express their opinion in the "we" form unless they have actively obtained the consent of everyone included in this "we".
3. respect the particular view of the world that each individual brings to the shared space as their perception. This does not have to correspond to my opinion and my world of experience
4. allow others to express their perception, their truth, their feelings
5. listen to the opinions of others without judgment. If we ourselves experience trigger points, we will engage in self-reflection or seek support to find a solution
6. to respect the individual development process that each of us will go through as part of the community

Should cases arise where it is not possible to resolve differences on our own, we will be prepared to look at this in a mediation process under the direction of the Barrio Cerrado "Paraiso Verde" Settlers' Council and reach a binding agreement/decision. The methods of conflict resolution to be used are always applied or adapted depending on the situation, if possible by the conflict parties themselves, but accompanied by a committee appointed by the community as a whole, until a solution has been found.

The general council of the Barrio Cerrado "Paraiso verde" may decide to change the basic ideas.
